NORMAN KEUCH, TINLEY YOUTH, FATALLY INJURED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

Norman Keuch, 19 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Keuch residing on the former Stege farm, died Monday morning at 11 o'clock in a Chicago hospital of head injuries and a fractured skull sustained when he was struck by an automobile at 63rd and Lowe Ave., in Chicago Sunday night about 10 o'clock.

In company with five cousins, he had attended a show. He had his car parked across the street from the show house and he told the other members of his party that he would unlock the car doors. As he started out ahead of them to cross the street, he stepped in the path of an on-coming car. The driver was too close to avoid hitting him, but stopped as quickly as he could and took the injured youth to the nearest hospital where he managed to give his name and his father's name and address before lapsing into unconsciousness. The best surgical and medical aid was pressed into service but the injuries were so serious that all efforts to save him, were of no avail and he passed away Monday forenoon about 11 o'clock.

Surviving are his parents, three brothers and four sisters, beside a host of friends and relatives. The deceased was born in Tinley Park in 1916 and has resided here all his life.

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon from the late home to the Zion Lutheran church in Tinley Park, at 2 o'clock with Rev. Albert Buddenhagen officiating.

Hundreds of people attended the last rites. The floral offerings were profuse.

FRANKFORT MEN'S ENDEAVOR CLUB MEETING

A very pleasant evening was spent at the Frankfort M. E. church when the Frankfort Men's Endeavor Club met to enjoy an evening of music. The wives and sweethearts of the club members were present.

The Green Garden M. E. choir numbering 35 voices, sang a beautiful cantata under the direction of Mrs. C. F. Schellhase. The serving committee, Messrs. Fred Hossbach, Urban Schellhase, Henry Nally, Robert Johnson and Reuben Schellhase, prepared a bountiful spread in the lower rooms of the church which was enjoyed by 125 guests.

Several new members were received into the club at the regular business session, which preceded the program.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held the first Monday evening in June. All men are invited.

Mrs. Paul Sanders New Head Orland Woman's Club

The annual election of officers of the Orland Park Woman's Club was held at its regular meeting Thursday May 2, in the James Greer hall.

Mrs. Paul Sanders was elected as president and the following officers to assist her: Mrs. John Humphrey, 1st vice president, Mrs. Thos. Wheeler, 2nd vice president, Mrs. Ella Loebe, corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. Maddox and Mrs. H. Kinney retain their offices as secretary and treasurer.

Mrs. Ella Loebe and Mrs. Paul Sanders will serve as delegates to the State convention in the Sherman hotel with Mrs. John Humphrey and Mrs. Edgar Graves, acting as alternates. The State convention will be held May 14, 15 and 16. It is hoped that as many club women as can will attend some of these sessions.

The program of the meeting last Thursday consisted of speakers from the Orland Park community. The Rev. Father Gorey who spoke on "A Citizen's Duty to His Community" was very interesting. He touched lightly on the duties a citizen is expected to perform ranging from duties to neighbors, organization to the community at large. He emphasized what we owe to our neighbors, to help make their lives, as well as our own, of a broader scope.

Mrs. W. R. Schussler talked on the early history of Orland Park and many old memories were recalled.

Mrs. Tom Cooper spoke on the home. All the speakers were enjoyed.

A pot-luck dinner was enjoyed with Mrs. C. Baehnein, Mrs. Geo. Gee Jr., and Mrs. C. Maddox acting as hostesses.

Orland Suburban Service Cut Down To Two Trains

Mayor Wm. Kollman of Orland Park has received a copy of a decision handed down by the Illinois Commerce Commission giving the Wabash railroad permission to take off all but two suburban trains between Chicago and Orland Park. These trains will operate as follows: Leave Orland Park for Chicago 6:02 a. m. Leave Chicago for Orland Park 4:25 p. m.

The Wabash railroad company in its petition to the commission to reduce its suburban train service showed a net deficit in the operation of the suburban service between Chicago and Orland Park for the year beginning June 1, 1933 and ending May 31, 1934 as $16,121.51 based upon the five representative months of June, July, August and September, 1933 and January 1934. A net loss of $1,850.43 for June 1934 and $1,355.88 for July 1934 is shown.

Residents along the Wabash fought the action of the company last fall. The objectors put in evidence census figures showing a population in 1930 for Orland Park 571, Palos Park 456, Worth 411, Chicago Ridge 269, Oak Lawn 2,045, a total population of 3,752.

The Commission in its decision sets forth that if at any time in the future the comfort, convenience and necessity of the public reasonably require the restoration of additional service, the Commission has continuing jurisdiction to require such restoration of additional service upon a proper showing.

WHAT LOTTIE HOLMAN O'NEILL SAYS ABOUT RELIEF TAX

"RELIEF—Deadlock between Washington and Springfield still exists with the former holding the stronger hand because they have most money. By the time you read this another roll call will have been had on Tuesday May 7, at which time the administration hopes to have forced the 14 votes which they lacked last week and the increase in the sales tax will take effect at once. The objections throughout the state are that the tax load is already too heavy, the present system of relief administration is bad and the dicta of H. L. Hopkins are offensive.

A rather peculiar thing is that relief clients are not urging the passage of the bill or showing alarm. In fact some oppose it on the ground that it is a tax on the poor and the relief administrators in the various counties are so objectionable that they do not want their power continued. Tax Payers are groaning at the load and complain many are getting relief that should not have it. Case workers are of course, lobbying for the bill, and are very much in evidence in the galleries of the House to applaud the abuse of those of us who are voting against it."

Day Labor To Be Used on Mokena Street Improvement

The state highway department thru E. T. Cash, state engineer at Elgin has notified the Mokena village board that the improvement of Carpenter Street from the intersection of Neithammer Avenue east to the Charles Geuther place to be built by the State as tax funds due to Mokena, is ready to be started.

Last fall the board passed a resolution appropriating $800 of the gas tax money for this improvement. The state engineer's office now asks the board to make the appropriation $900 so the street can be improved all the way. The street is to be improved with stone dressing. The width is to be 18 feet and the thickness 3 inches. The first estimate last year called for an 8 inch thick surface.

The engineer's office sent copies of a resolution for the board to adopt and in these resolutions a provision is made that all work be done by day labor by the unemployed of the community.

The Mokena Council feels that 3 inches of stone is not thick enough for a top dressing and is investigating what neighboring towns are building from their share of the gas tax and as soon as the board decides what action to take the project will be under way. Up to the present time Mokena has $1,000 coming from the state gas tax fund.

Musical Ensemble To Hold Card Party

Prosperity Chain Letters Flooding Country Towns

The "Prosperity Contribute a Dime" chain letter craze has hit the country towns with full force the past week. At New Lenox people have been receiving chain letters asking for contributions all the way from 10c to 25c and up to $1.00.

In Mokena quite a number of people are sending out letters to five of their friends and so on. Most of the letters here are of the dime variety. So far no reports have been made of any receiving any money.

In Tinley Park and Orland Park, the letters have been chiefly of the dime variety. Those persons who receive letters asking for a dime contribution are willing to risk a dime, but when 25c or a dollar is asked, they are ready to break the chain.

Despite the fact that the postal department has been frowning upon the chain letter craze, the craze is gaining in popularity from day to day.

Suicide Was Not A Christian Scientist

Mrs. A. C. Scheiblich of Mokena, who is identified with the Christian Science Church, states that Mrs. Eleanor Smith Hoover of Joliet who shot and killed Edward Schenkel former Mokena Police chief in a Joliet tavern and then killed herself, was not a member of the Christian Science church and no services were held for her by the Christian Science church. Knotty Dog Problem Vexes Mokena Village Dads

Mokena is over run with dogs. Some of these dogs are strays while others have owners. But what is troubling the village fathers now, is that complaints are coming in from all over the village about these dogs running loose and destroying gardens. The matter was referred to Howard Schlutz, village attorney Tuesday night, but the attorney advised that dogs cannot be shot without laying the person shooting them, liable for damages in case the owner should prosecute. A dog pound was suggested but as this would entail extra expense to the village, the proposition was not considered favorably. As a result the village dads are wrestling with a knotty problem.

Owners of dogs should have enough civic pride, however, to at least tie up the canines and thus abate the dog nuisance. Stray dogs however, are likely to be disposed of without ceremony.

Father and Son Take Up Aldermanic Duties

Thru a rather odd coincidence a father and son entered upon the duties of alderman, tho in two different towns. Tuesday evening Fred Rauch of Mokena took up the duties of alderman in Mokena to which office he was elected April 16th. On Monday evening his father Louis Rauch took up similar duties in the city of Blue Island. The Mokena alderman was presented with a fine basket of flowers by his relatives who witnessed his induction into office. Rocco Guglielmucci, alderman of the 3rd ward of Blue Island also witnessed Mr. Fred Rauch take office at Mokena.

James Sherwood to Put on Fish Frys

James Sherwood who operates the Green Tavern and lunchroom in New Lenox is preparing to put on a fish fry every Friday night beginning this week.

Notice

All owners of dogs in Mokena are urged to keep them tied up so as to avoid their destroying gardens and lawns. The Village Board kindly asks for the whole hearted support of the citizens in this matter.

BOARD OF MOKENA.

The choir, under the direction of Mrs. Wesley Hollstein, sang several selections, and Mrs. Wesley Hollstein, accompanied by Mrs. C. F. Schellhase, rendered a beautiful solo.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—In the last two weeks the National Capital has been under the tent of a three-ring circus, if ever one existed. At the Capitol building, there has been utter confusion as Democrats fought among themselves and Republicans and Independents sat on the sidelines and said "sic em." At the other end of Pennsylvania avenue, business activity has been amazing. The President was beginning to start to commence to spend five billion dollars. In between has been the largest hangover of Easter visitors the Capital city has known in recent years.

Mr. Roosevelt, having complete control of the largest sum of money ever turned over to one man, has been running his brain at lightning speed to make good on his promise that actual spending will begin in two months. He has announced that some sixty agents of the government will participate in the spending function but roosting on top of the various spending groups are to be three newly created boards, each responsible to his direction and each enjoined to bear down in order that the public works and relief funds in his charge may flow freely.

I hear general commendation of the President for selecting Frank C. Walker of Montana and New York to head up the spending operations. Mr. Walker, a lawyer, is experienced in a big business way and is accepted everywhere as a man with capacity to do the job. The fly that is floating around and threatens to get into the ointment, however, is the existence of two schools of thought in the administration. This condition may undo the good work which Mr. Walker is regarded as capable of doing.

The five-billion-dollar spending machine will be guided first by the President, second by Mr. Walker and third by the various agencies now in existence.

President Will Guide

They are supposed to present plans and Mr. Walker will be expected to analyze and determine their values.

Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, under-secretary of agriculture, will have something like nine hundred million dollars to spend in remaking the rural districts of the nation in a job variously described as "rural resettlement" and other similar short titles. This program contemplates expansion and intensification of work now being done by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, including attacks on the problem of dust storms and other types of soil erosion. Although Professor Tugwell has no plans complete, he is working in the direction of transplanting many farmers from poor land where living is hard to more fertile fields. Under his jurisdiction also will be reforestation and a general examination of land uses.

A second agency that is new in the current set-up provides for development of rural electrification. The third new spending movement is directed at dangerous railroad grade crossings. The funds that will be set aside for these latter two, however, will total only about one-fourth as much as Professor Tugwell will spend in his orgy.

Other scheduled programs for expenditure include:

Assistance to clerical and professional workers—the white collar folks.

Loans and grants to states, cities and counties.

Development of new housing construction in cities and rural districts and general reconditioning and remodeling of homes already existing.

Extension and expansion of the Civilian Conservation corps to a maximum of six hundred thousand workers.

Further public building construction but in a less extensive manner than previously was attempted.

Although the President assured congress that he himself would administer the five-billion-dollar fund, and succeeded in quieting criticism to some extent by the statement, official announcement of the allotment board shows the name of Secretary Ickes as chairman. Many caustic darts were fired at Mr. Ickes during the two months while the public works bill was held up in congress, because members did not like the Ickes policy as public works administrator. Of course, as the set-up now stands Mr. Walker will determine the character of spending and Mr. Ickes and his allotment board will determine how much money each may have. That would seem to eliminate the causes of trouble experienced heretofore by the members of congress and the Ickes organization. Nevertheless, critics of the secretary have begun to suspect something.

Mr. Roosevelt has said in White House press conferences several times lately that he would permit no delay in getting the spending machinery in motion. He assured the country in his radio speech the other night that his policy was to be speed and assistance where the money will do the most good. The President certainly has made clear that he is anxious to get things going.

Newspaper correspondents reporting

Amuses the Press

Capital news had a good laugh the other day at the attempt of the Democratic national congressional committee to satisfy all sections of the country in an announcement made by the committee respecting its organization. I can conceive of no better way to tell the story than to quote opening paragraphs from four statements issued simultaneously by the committee on the subject mentioned. The paragraphs which follow are taken from my office in one envelope:

1—"The West will play an important part in the direction of the campaign of the Democratic national congressional committee, now being organized by Chairman P. H. Drewry of Virginia. Representative Abe Murdock of Beaver, Utah, has been selected as a vice chairman of this committee, and, under plans proposed, will have general supervision over the campaign in the West."

2—"In the organization on for the coming campaign of the Democratic national congressional committee the South will play a very important part. Not only is Congressman P. H. Drewry of Virginia chairman of this committee, but he has selected other southern congressmen to aid him. Representative Virgil Chapman of the Sixth Kentucky district has been chosen as chairman of the very important executive committee. His is what is historically known as the Henry Clay district, and has been a political battle ground of the nation for considerably more than one hundred years."

3—"Unless all signs fail, the Middle West will be an important battle ground in the congressional elections of next year. Representative P. H. Drewry of Virginia has recognized this when, as chairman of the Democratic national congressional committee, he aided in the selection of Congressman Eugene B. Crowe of the Ninth Indiana district, as first vice chairman of the Democratic national congressional committee. Representative Crowe will have general supervision over Democratic campaign activities of congressional candidates throughout the central part of the country. His jurisdiction will extend from the Ohio to the Great Lakes. Practically every national election for the last one-half century or more has been won or lost in the states comprising this district."

4—"In the reorganization of the Democratic national congressional committee Chairman P. H. Drewry of Virginia has sought to give additional prominence to members from the East. Representative William J. Granfield of Massachusetts has been selected as one of the vice chairmen and will have general supervision over campaign activities throughout the North and East. Associated with him will be Representative William N. Rogers of New Hampshire, who has been named a member of the executive committee. Congressman Rogers represents the district which boasts of Daniel Webster, the great orator of one hundred years ago."

Of course, it was intended that the statements should be distributed to correspondents from the various sections of the country so that western newspapers would have been told how important their section was and eastern newspapers would have had information to the effect that the eastern section was all important. It was not an unusual procedure but it happened that the statements were distributed together and that afforded the butt of the joke.

Bankhead's Idea

Senator Bankhead (Dem., Ala.), of cotton production control fame, has another idea for legislation. This time the senator is seeking to make it possible, he says, for every tenant farmer to become a land owner. He has legislation pending in congress to carry out his program and it appears now that it may go through.

It is proposed to create another government-owned corporation which would have power to issue one and a half billion dollars' worth of government-guaranteed bonds. These bonds could be sold by the corporation and the proceeds used to buy land for present landless farmers. They would become owners in name and would have the millstone of that debt around their necks for twenty years if they succeeded in earning enough income to pay off the debt in that time. It is true the measure would open the way for land ownership and would make the terms of ownership about as easy as is possible when one borrows another's money. Those facts, however, do not remove the conditions which a good many observers hold are bad.

For instance, it is difficult to see how the tenant can make a living and sufficient profit to pay off the debt to the government if he has been unable to accomplish that same purpose with money borrowed commercially. It is being said freely that such legislation will serve only the purpose of relieving present owners of land which they do not want by its transfer through the government to others who may not be able to pay for it. In other words, it is another bill to put more people in debt.

At a conference of representatives of the two cities it was unanimously voted to accept the offer of the Cleveland (Ohio) Gas Machinery company to take over the gas plant in Centralia of the Illinois Light corporation and operate it for the public benefit until a settlement of the labor fight has been reached. The plant supplies Centralia, Mount Vernon, Central City, and Wamac.

State and capital police in Springfield believed that danger of open war between rival miners' unions as a result of a street shooting was averted by surrender of Ray Edmundson, district president of the United Mine Workers of America, to answer murder charges. Edmundson surrendered at police headquarters after remaining secretly for 24 hours in a Taylorville hospital. He suffered a bullet wound in the neck in the shooting, in which one member of the Progressive Miners of America was killed and nine wounded. Fred Thomason of Springfield and William Furlow of Alton, members of the U. M. W. A., an American Federation of Labor affiliate, also are held under warrants charging first degree murder. Police Chief Carl Nuess said all three confessed that they were in Edmundson's motor car when a rifle and revolver suddenly spewed a hail of bullets into members of the Progressive union before its headquarters. Thomason was captured in his home a few minutes after the affray. He was wounded in a shoulder. Furlow surrendered a few hours before Edmundson returned. All said they fired in self-defense against threatened violence at the hands of Progressives.

Move to Create Monument to Great Sailor in World He Discovered; Island of Hayti Selected as the Most Appropriate Site.

Some brief descriptions have come down to us about one of the Seven Wonders of the ancient world, the Lighthouse of Alexandria.

It was built on the island of Pharos in the harbor and was connected with the city by the Seven Furlong bridge. Accounts placing the height of its tower at 600 feet are believed to be overdrawn and 400 feet is regarded as more probable. Built by Sostratus of Cnidus, it was begun under Ptolemy I of Egypt and was finished under Ptolemy II, its cost being placed at 800 talents, which by some valuations might be the equivalent of as much as $1,600,000.

From the Pharos of Alexandria is traced an addition to languages and an influence on lighthouse and also on other architecture. The word Pharos came to be applied to lighthouses generally and with some change in spelling is of common usage in certain modern tongues, while pharology became a technical term for lighthouse building. The first of the lighthouses in western Europe, built by the Romans, was called the Pharos of Dover, while the minarets of Mohammedan mosques symbolize lighthouses and in the earlier ones we possibly may see what their model, the original Alexandria structure, looked like. Some influence on the steeples of Christian churches is discerned by writers.

An example of special dignity and worthiness is accordingly followed in elaborate plans for creating, in the western hemisphere, a like wonder of the modern world in a monument to Christopher Columbus. Its site will not be at any modern Alexandria—at any of the great ports of the New world he discovered, but on the island of Hayti, on which he landed during his very first voyage, where he established the first American colony and where his remains were buried in 1536, 30 years after his death. During the partial occupancy of that island by Americans of late the project has been advanced to a stage where success seems certain.

If the plan is carried out as contemplated, no other undertaking will be representative of the New world in as complete a sense, for it is proposed that every western national government, large or small, shall contribute to its $2,000,000 cost. A design for a noble structure has already been made, embodying special precautions against a Caribbean peril, the original Pharos having been destroyed by an earthquake in the Thirteenth century.

To some it will seem important to know whether the remains of Columbus still rest in the ancient cathedral of Santo Domingo, in the island's second republic, and some recent works of reference print as authoritative the version of the Spanish government as to their removal years ago. The bare statement that the wrong tomb was opened and the bones of one of Columbus' sons taken away, and not those of Columbus himself, does not seem very convincing, but if the data preserved by those called in as observers during an examination at the cathedral some years ago are accurate, a mistake was made by the Spanish. Insignia, lettering, other small evidences indicated that the tomb which had been opened was undoubtedly that of the son and that another tomb now holds the few fragments of Columbus' bones and the observers were men of intelligence, including high ecclesiastics, officials and others.

But whether or not their opinion was correct, this is an appropriate site for many other reasons, and what could be a more appropriate form for a monument to the greatest navigator of all than a splendid pinnacle carrying a perpetual light for the guidance of his successors on the seas? This will be more than a flame seen afar for directing those who ply the ocean. It is also designed for those plying the upper air. Aviation is now farther advanced than was the lore of the sea in Columbus' time. Probably air routes along the short parallels of latitude in the inclement North will always be followed, but distance is much less important than safety to aviation, making miles by the hundreds in an hour.

May we not believe that the favorite routes of the future will be along the warmer, milder, safer parallels to our southern ports; that the skies to be "whitened" by flying craft will be skies to the south and that the Pharos of Columbus, looked for by many an eye on dark nights and stormy nights, will be a wonder and preserver vouchsafing in the Caribbean blessings to the imperiled greater even than those of its predecessor of the Mediterranean.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

HIGHER SHOULDERS—WIDER, DEEPER NON-SKID TREAD—MORE RUBBER ON THE ROAD

These Truck Tires Will Cut Operating Costs for You

FIRESTONE has constantly been the pioneer and leader in the development of balloon tires for trucks, and in the New Firestone Truck Tire for 1935 we have incorporated improvements that enable you to maintain uninterrupted schedules at higher speeds—at lowest cost per mile.

A new tread compound has been developed, which is tougher and longer wearing. The tread has been specially designed with higher, more rugged shoulders and wider, deeper non-skid, with more rubber on the road. It is possible to hold this thicker tread to the Gum-Dipped cord body because of the patented Firestone construction of two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread. These improvements give you greatest blowout protection and non-skid safety for the higher hauling speeds of today.

Ancient Sumerian Statues Shown in Chicago

THESE Sumerian statues, 5,000 years old, exhibiting considerable artistic competence, have been placed in the museum of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago. They are part of a hoard of sacred images without parallel among known Babylonian works of art, and were discovered by the Iraq expedition of the Oriental Institute, under the field directorship of dad, Iraq. Renovation of the shrine of the god of Abu, Lord of Fertility, at Tell Asmar, sometime between 3000 and 2800 B. C., saved a large number of the statues. Because they had been consecrated they could not be thrown away or sold and so they were buried under the floor of the shrine, to remain until the institute expedition uncovered them.

DANNY CROSSES THE LAUGHING BROOK

Look long enough and hard enough, You'll always find a way To reach the place or get the thing You're hoping that you may.

DANNY MEADOW MOUSE peeped out from under the tangle of matted grass back toward the Smiling Pool. Plunger the Osprey was rising higher and higher in the air and there was nothing in his great claws. It was clear that he had failed to catch the Big Pickerel.

"I'm glad of it," muttered Danny, which, when you think of it, was rather funny, for the Big Pickerel had been watching for Danny himself and would have liked nothing better than to have snapped his big jaws on him. But Danny knew so well what it felt like to be hunted that though he was rather glad that the Big Pickerel had been given a fright, he was also glad that he had escaped.

Of Billy Mink, Snapper the Turtle and the Big Pickerel he could see nothing at all and rightly guessed that all were in hiding. Reddy Fox was sitting on the opposite bank, looking up at Plunger and grinning in the most provoking way.

"They've forgotten about poor little me," thought Danny and his heart stopped pit-a-patting quite so fast. "The thing for me to do is to keep going while the going is good. I've got to get across to the other side but I don't dare swim across the Smiling Pool. The Laughing Brook comes in right here and if I keep on following along the bank perhaps I will find a place where I can cross it without having to swim. It isn't the water but the things 'in the water I fear." Danny shuddered as he thought of the Big Pickerel.

As soon as he had quite recovered his breath he started on, darting from one hiding place to another, here a bunch of grass, there a big mullen leaf, yonder a piece of bark, and again a pile of sticks. He never stopped out in the open. No indeed. That would have been the very worst kind of Meadow Mouse folly!

Now the water in the Laughing Brook ran swiftly in places, leaped in merry little falls, or seemingly rested in quiet pools, but for a long, long way it offered no crossing-place for a tired little Meadow Mouse who was afraid to swim because of hungry fish who might be watching. Though he rested often, Danny grew more and more tired.

All afternoon he traveled and he was getting just a little discouraged and almost a little hopeless when just as the Black Shadows came creeping silently through the Green Forest he came to a bridge. It was only an old log which had fallen across the Laughing Brook, but for Danny it was a real bridge. He looked this way, that way and the other way. He listened with both ears. Then he scampered across and gave a tiny sigh of thankfulness. He was on the home side at last.

VARIOUS GOOD THINGS

A SALAD may be made from so many different food combinations that one need never be at a loss for one. An apple, a few dates, a slice of mild onion, will make a most tasty combination. A slice of tomato, topped with chopped onion and celery, or chopped cucumber and onion, a bit of chopped green pepper and any dressing at hand will make another. Arrange alternate slices of orange and tomato on lettuce. Sprinkle with finely chopped celery and serve with french dressing.

Scald one cupful of milk with one tablespoonful of coffee and strain. Add four and one-half tablespoonfuls of tapioca, a dash of salt, and cook until the tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Now add one-third of a cupful of sugar, cool, add three beaten egg yolks and fold in the stiffly beaten whites.

Lesson for May 12

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

LESSON TEXT—Ephesians 4:1-7, 11-16; Acts 2:41-45.

GOLDEN TEXT—So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another.—Romans 12:5.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Going to God's House.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What a Church Is.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What the Church Is For.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Nature and Work of the Church.

I. What It Is (Eph. 3:3-6).

It is the body of redeemed men and women of Jews and Gentiles called out from the world, regenerated and united to Jesus Christ as head and to each other by the Holy Spirit (I Cor. 12:13).

1. It was unknown in Old Testament times (Eph. 3:5, 6).

2. It was predicted by Christ (Matt. 16:18). Shortly before Christ went to the cross he spoke of the Church as still in the future. He said, "I will build my church."

3. It came into being at Pentecost (Acts 2).

II. Christ Is the Head of the Church (Eph. 1:22, 23).

Jesus Christ is to the Church what the head is to the human body. He is so vitally its head as to direct all its activities.

III. The Unity of the Church (Eph. 4:4-6).

Having in verses 1-3 of this chapter set forth the virtues necessary for the realization and maintenance of unity in the Church, in verses 4-6 he sets down the fundamental unities which make unity of the body.

1. One body (v. 4). Since all believers have been united to Christ by faith, they are members of the one body of which he is the head.

2. One Spirit (v. 4). This is the Holy Spirit. He is the agent in regeneration and the baptizer into the one body and is the animating life uniting the believers to Christ and to one another.

3. One hope (v. 4). Completed redemption at the coming of the Lord is the Christian's hope.

4. One Lord (v. 5). The one ruler of the Church is the Lord Jesus Christ.

5. One faith (v. 5). This faith is the one doctrine which centers in Christ and the one instrument which unites the believer to Christ.

6. One baptism (v. 5). This means the baptism of the Holy Spirit—that sovereign act of the Spirit which unites believers to Jesus Christ as head and to each other as members of his body.

7. One God and Father of all (v. 6). This is the almighty Creator and Sustainer of the universe.

IV. How the Church Grows (Eph. 4:11-16). It is through the ministry of certain officials having the gifts of the Spirit.

1. Gifts bestowed upon the Church (v. 11).

a. Apostles. These were appointed by Christ to superintend the preaching of the gospel in all the world and the creation of an authoritative body of teaching, the Scriptures.

b. Prophets. These ministers were given for the expounding of the Scriptures.

c. Evangelists. These seem to have been traveling missionaries.

d. Pastors and teachers. The pastor was a shepherd-teacher, the two functions inherent in the one office.

2. The object of the ministry of the Church (v. 12).

a. "Perfecting of the saints." Perfecting means the mending of that which has been rent; the adjusting of something dislocated.

b. "For the work of the ministry" (v. 12). The perfecting of the saints has as its object the qualification to render efficient service.

c. "Edifying of the body of Christ." Edify means to build up.

3. The duration of the Church's ministry (v. 13). It is to continue until

a. There is unity of faith.

b. We come into the knowledge of the Son of God. Unity of faith can only be realized when the members of the Church come to know Jesus Christ as the very Son of God.

c. A perfect man, which is the measure of the stature of Christ.

4. The blessed issue of the ministry of the Church (vv. 14-16).

a. Not tossed to and fro and carried about by every wind of doctrine (v. 14). Knowledge of Christ as the very Son of God is the sure defense against the efforts of cunning men.

b. Speaking the truth in love (vv. 15, 16). Holding the truth of Jesus Christ as the Son of God in the spirit of sincerity and love will issue in the symmetrical development of believers, causing them to grow up in him as head.

What Is Truth?

By W. J. Geffert,
Lutheran Minister

Ancient Greek and Roman philosophers tried to fix truth on the basis of human reason. Modern philosophers try the same. What is the result? A great number of people become skeptics. Like Pontius Pilate of old they put the jeering question: "What is truth?" and label as foolish any claims to the knowledge of truth.

Jesus Christ who said that He had come into the world to bear witness unto the truth is rejected by the many so-called wise and cultured people of this world. Why? Because the truth as taught by Him is not based on human reason. Jesus says:

"If ye continue in my word... then ye shall know the truth" John 8, 31, 32. Skeptics object and say: "Then we must accept the Bible with all its miracles as truth; that is asking too much!"

We agree with the man Schenkel who says: "Only a few people are wise enough to see it requires much more mind to believe in miracles than reason to deny them."

And so, as long as people think it "fashionable" to reject the Bible as truth, so long they willfully close their minds to the only possible answer to their question: "What is Truth?"

No doubt many have been overawed by the parade of learning and wisdom of Bible critics and have therefore refused to give the Bible a fair trial. But have they not heard the stones cry out? Of late many stones have cried out in testimony of the truth of the Bible. More of this later.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, "Penelope," in an effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. At a baseball game a ball strikes ten-year-old Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for her when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young psychiatrist, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is also won over. Nance's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Nance escapes, although shot, and goes to Lanny's apartment, from which, by McNamara's orders, she is removed to the chief's home. From one of the men in the boat on which the girl escaped McNamara learns that Nance's real name is Penelope Gatlin. He also discovers that she is heiress to $750,000.

Angellotti was a resourceful fellow. "Let's call on that Lanning woman, apologize for our rough work last night, an' maybe she'll slip us some o' that pre-war Bourbon again."

Flynn nodded, and they drove to Lanny's house. Lanny received them coldly. "Have you come to search my house again?" she demanded irritably.

No mule's face could possibly have been longer and sadder than P. Flynn's. "We didn't come to annoy you, Miss Lanning. The chief's give us the inside story. We just called to apologize for even suspectin' you."

"An officer," Angellotti explained, "has got to do a lot o' things he don't like to do in the discharge of his duty. The apology goes double, Miss Lanning."

"It's accepted." Then they shook hands. "How about a shot in the arm?" Lanny, the worldling, suggested, much mollified.

Angellotti shrugged expressively. "Well, seein' as how," P. Flynn murmured. So they had three drinks and spent a very pleasant evening with Lanny and she was loath to see them depart.

Now, Lanny was aware that Stephen had planned to visit his queer patients after dinner that night. So she telephoned—and Dan McNamara answered.

"I shouldn't ring you up this late and get you out of bed—"

"Not at all. Just got in this minute."

"I'm glad. How's everything, Dan?"

"I haven't seen the patients, but my chief of staff was up waiting for me, and reports everything jake."

"That's all I wanted to know. Thanks, Dan. Oh, by the way, Flynn and Angellotti called on me again, to-night."

"What's that?" The chief's voice was a roar. "What are those two eggs up to? I told them to lay off you."

"They're doing that, Dan. They just called to apologize. They spent the evening with me. They only left a moment ago."

"The liquor must have run out."

"Oh, Dan!"

"I know those two. It would never occur to them to apologize to anybody if they didn't have a reason. It's just as I suspected, Lanny. They're going to hang on to this case on the quiet and trail you around."

An anguished thought popped into Lanny's agile brain. "Oh, Dan, suppose they took a notion to trail Stevie!"

"Hush! You don't have to paint me any picture, Lanny. When did these two bumbos call at your house?"

"At nine-fifteen."

"Wait a minute." Lanny waited a minute and then McNamara said: "Stephen left here just about that time, so I guess we're safe tonight. And tomorrow I'll cover that loophole. I'm an ass not to have thought of it before. Good night."

In the morning Dan McNamara sent for Flynn and informed him he was to depart that night for Los Angeles to bring back a prisoner. Flynn begged Angellotti to keep his eyes on the job. But that night McNamara found other work for Angellotti. By the time Flynn returned, Angellotti was gone, and the same night, without a moment's notice, McNamara shot him up to Seattle on a similar job.

He let himself into the house that night with his latchkey, turned on the hall light and whistled. "Hello, everybody," he shouted. Nobody answered, so he hurried down to Nance's room. The door was open. He switched on the light and found a disordered bed with nobody in it. He searched the house thoroughly, only to discover he was alone in it; finally, on the living room table he found a note:

"Dear Chief: We think you mean well and we thank you for what you have done, but the dicks are watching this house. They trailed the doctor last night, but a friend of ours trailed them. Forgive us if we just can't trust any cop. Anyhow, it would be embarrassing for you if your men found us here. Good-by and good luck."

McNamara sat down. He was suddenly weak. So he hadn't fooled Flynn and Angellotti after all. The smart devils! Well, they might suspect all they pleased, but unless they had seen his guests and recognized Nance they could never prove anything.

He realized now that his act in sending them out of the state would clinch their suspicions; they would be sure to have somebody in their confidence keep the house under constant surveillance until they got back. Evidently they had sent a bungler and the ex-soldier had spotted the fellow—he wondered if Nance and her loyal friends had made a clean getaway.

The front doorbell rang and he went to answer it. A thin, bent man stood in the entrance, and even in the dim light from the hall McNamara knew him for an ex-convict in his prison suit of civilian clothes.

"Chief McNamara?" he queried huskily.

"Yes, I'm the chief."

"I got out of San Quentin this morning. I had a message for you, but I didn't want to come to headquarters to deliver it. Benny the Beetle told me to tell you to rest easy."

"Thanks, friend. Come in and rest easy yourself. Let's get acquainted," McNamara invited hospitably. In the clearer light of the living room he saw his visitor was far from being a well man. "What is it, kid?" he demanded. "Hop—or T. B.?"

"The old coughin' sickness, Chief. The prison directors shortened my term to let me out for treatment. As if I can get treatment anywhere," he added bitterly.

"Oh, yes, you can. I'm living alone here for the next thirty days, so I'll get a nurse in to take care of you, and you stay here."

The man looked at him suspiciously. "You mean it, Chief?"

"What did Benny tell you about me?" McNamara asked.

"He told me to trust you. He said you was one human being, even if you was a chief of police."

He changed the linen on Nance's bed, put the room in order, laid out a suit of pajamas and ordered his guest to bed.

"And now, me bold bucks," he reflected, "keep on trailing Doctor Burt to my house, if you feel like it."

He waited until Stephen Burt arrived, and explained the situation to him. Stephen considered it a tremendous joke but commended his line of attack on Flynn and Angellotti.

"Hello, Stevie, Old Darling."

"The man does need treatment very badly," he told the chief. "I'll send around a practical nurse early tomorrow morning to look after him, and I'll continue to call upon the poor devil nightly until further orders. We're both involved in a tricky game now and must play the hand through."

Doctor Burt was suddenly serious. "I do hope we haven't lost Nance, Dan. She's the most interesting psychological case I've ever seen."

"She ain't lost, but I'll bet a cookie she's well hid. But I'll locate her within twelve hours," Chief McNamara added, thinking of Ella Cates.

"I've run Nance's early history down since I saw her last, Doc," he announced suddenly. "I got busy the other day and luck was with me. She's an heiress and her name is Penelope Gatlin. She got it in the nose by a baseball—a long fly into the bleachers. But I also discovered something else. It's a question whether she ain't just a natural nut. Her mother is. She led Gatlin a h—l of a life."

"No, I don't think it's congenital, Dan. There's something about that girl that's healthy—mentally and physically. Did you meet her mother?"

"No, but I'm going to run her down easy enough."

Stephen sighed. "Oh, poor Nance! I'm afraid she's beyond my skill, after all. A bad family history, Mac—very bad. There's a structural weakness in some families that never gets bred out, and I suspect poor Nance has an inheritance of mental instability from her mother."

"Well, with that busted nose, her inheritance and her hellcat mother, she certainly had a fine start on the road to the foolish farm, didn't she, Doc? Excuse me, there's the telephone."

Lanny was calling. "Dan," she quavered, "my house has been burglarized. They jimmed the back door, and for all I know the burglars are upstairs still. I'm watching the staircase—got my pistol covering it. Come over quick, Dan—please."

"Coming right away, Lanny." He hung up and faced Stephen. "Lanny has burglars. Into your car, boy, and we'll beat it over."

CHAPTER VII

Lanny, very white and shaken, was in her living room, pistol in hand, watching the stairs, when McNamara and Stephen came noiselessly in the back door. The chief whipped out his pistol and went unhesitatingly up the stairs. Presently he called them to come up.

They found him standing in the doorway leading into Lanny's guest chamber. "Take a look at that," he ordered.

They looked. Lying in the bed, sound asleep, was Nance Belden!

McNamara switched off the light and softly closed the door. With his great head clasped in both huge hands he went down the stairs to the living room. "Doc," he pleaded, "whose loony now? I think I am because I'm seeing things that ain't in the book. Ochone, ochone, and wirra, wirra, the fairies have me in tow!"

"Got to get her out of here," Dan McNamara decided. "Flynn and Angellotti finally got on her trail, no doubt about that—and it's a mighty cold trail those two dicks can't follow. I suspected this, and the note she left at my house confirms it. It's just the mercy of God that Flynn and Angellotti didn't happen to slip into my domicile and find the note. If they had I'd be sunk. They can suspect all they want to, but hanging it on to me is another pair of boots, as the French say."

"Why, they wouldn't dare invade their own chief's house," Lanny protested.

"They wouldn't? You don't know those two bozos like I do. They'd dare anything if they figured they could get away with it."

"Can't you give the miserable snoopers an office job?" Lanny demanded. She was faintly provoked at Daniel for his lack of initiative.

"Would you herd cows with a couple of horses that had won the derby?"

"Oh!"

"Wake that psychopathic nuisance up, Lanny, and get her down here. I've got to find out things or go crazy. Besides, she hasn't had any dinner."

"Let the poor lamb sleep, Dan," pleaded Lanny.

"I need a lot of sleep myself and I can't get it until I know how, when and where Nance and her gang made the getaway. Suppose Flynn and Angellotti let them make the getaway; suppose Flynn followed the men and Angellotti followed Nance? They'd do that; they wouldn't risk getting in Dutch with me by making the pinch as the gang came out of my house. They have some loyalty and a lot of common sense, and they know which side their bread is buttered on. When they take the girl they'll not turn her in to me. They'll waltz her straight back to San Quentin to the warden and let his men get the credit for recapturing her. All they want is the reward. Suppose they know she's here now and suppose they've seen me come here? Ouch! Murderation!"

"Have her down, Lanny," Stephen commanded in his operating room voice, and Lanny had no alternative save to obey. So presently Nance came down the stairs with her. The girl was arrayed in an old faded dressing gown of Lanny's, her hair was tousled, and she yawned sleepily.

"Hello, Stevie, old darling; hello, Dan, you great big beautiful thing. Here I am."

"Sit down," McNamara invited in honeyed accents.

So Nance sat down promptly—on his tremendous knees—put her arm around his burly neck and kissed him. "Now, don't get excited," she cooed. "I know exactly what's burning you up, but you needn't worry. One of the boys recognized Flynn and I recognized Angellotti, because he's the dick that pinched me the first time I got in Dutch. They kept circling the block in their car all the afternoon, and when it was almost dark we saw Flynn go into an alley alongside a vacant house across the street. We decided Angellotti had gone home for dinner. So we telephoned Angellotti's house and his wife said that he was eating his dinner, and unless it was important to call up in fifteen minutes. So we said it wasn't important, hung up and held a conference."

"We decided the back of the house wasn't guarded, so we telephoned the boy friend that met us at the yacht harbor that night, and he came and parked in the next street. We went out your back door, leaving the light in the front room burning and shimmied over the back fence. Some job for two members of the party, I'll say. Once over the fence we had to prowl through the back yard of the house that abuts against the rear of your house—and a dog bit me, but not very hard. We got out in front and into the next street before anybody could come out and see what luck the dog had had; our car was there and we beat it. We're pretty sure nobody followed us, but we drove out to the park first with our lights doused, and when we were sure nobody was trailing us, the boys brought me here. We jimmed your back door, Lanny dear; then the boys said good-by to me for keeps. It seems you don't want me associating with them any more and they think you're right about that, Dan."

A GOOD IDEA—Use Beagley's potted plants this year. You cannot afford to take chances on home grown seedlings or plants that are shipped in, when you can purchase real plants here at home. Plants are started in the hot bed and then transplanted and grown in special individual bands filled with balanced plant food. When danger of frost is past, place plant, dirt and band in the ground and it will produce much earlier than usual. No transplanting, no exposed roots, no set-back. The bands will tend to protect the plants from cut worms and will rot away during the season. Best varieties of tomato, cabbage, cauliflower, pepper, celery, pimento, celery cabbage, broccoli, sage and head lettuce. Prices very reasonable. Clarence Beagley, Orland Park, Ill. Tel. 136-J-2.
